How a Baby Opens Its Mental Eyes. In the last volume of the "Educational Series" or "The Development of the In-tellect" Mr. H. W. Brown has presented a conspectue of the observations of Pro-fessor Preyer on the mind of the child inches by 8 2-5 inches square and development of the senses, intellect and will of the growing child, and presents in a condensed form the result of a great number of careful observations. It is recorded that sensibility to light, touch, temperature, smell and taste are present on the first day of infant life. Hearing, therefore, is the only special sense which is not active at this time. The child hears by the third or fourth day. Taste and smell are senses at first most active, but they are not differentiated. General organic sensations of well being or dis-comfort are felt from the first, but pain and pleasure, as mental states, are not noted till at or near the second month.

The first sign of speech in the shape of utterance of consonant sounds is heard in the latter part of the second month, these consonants being generally "m," "r," "g," or "t." All the movements of the eyes become co-ordinate by the fourth month, and by this time the child begins to have the "feeling of self," that is, he looks at his own hands and looks at himself in the mirror. The study of the child's mind during the first year shows conclusively that ideas develop and reasoning processes occur before there is any knowledge of words or language; though it may be assumed that the child thinks in symbols, visual or auditory, which are clumsy equivalents for words. By the end of the year the for words. By the end of the year the child begins to express itself by sounds; that is, speech begins. The development of this speech capacity is, according to Preyer, in accordance with the development of the intellectual powers. By the end of the second year the child's power of speech is practically acquired.

The Flag That Tripped Up Booth. A handsome mahogany case, contain-ing a silk flag with gold bullion fringe, occupies nearly all the available space of the wall in the southern part of the room of Capt. Cobaugh at the treasury department. Every visitor to the depart ment is shown the flag and attention is generally invited to a tear in one of its strips. The flag formerly belonged to the Treasury guards, a volunteer organization formed during the war for emer gencies that might arise at the capital of the nation. After the fall of Richmond, and the night that President Lincoln went to Ford's theatre, the flag, which was then attached to a stout rosewood dagstaff, was borrowed by John T. Ford for decorative uses about the box occu pied by the president. When the assassin fired the shot whose echo was heard throughout the civilized world he leaped from the box, and in doing so caught the rowel of his spur in the silken folds of the starry banner protruding from the president's box. That slip probably cost Booth his life, for the flag tripped him and caused the broken leg which impeded him in his efforts to escape and rendered him an easy victim for Sergt. Boston Corbett's rifle ball. Subsequently the flag was returned to the treasury de-partment, and during the few days that President Johnson had his office in the department the flag was in a corner of the apartment. It was removed, however, by Capt. Cobaugh to its present resting place, and the staff was made into three canes and presented to officials of the treasury department.—Washington Letter in Philadelphia News.

Human agencies, through mysterious channels, work some singular changes. Up to the opening of the new year the Grand Army of the Republic had religiously systematically and pointedly excluded the colored troops from that organization, declining to grant them posts in the South, although they were organized in the North and East. Because Captain Gray, nander at New Captain H. Captain Gray retaliated, with the approval of General Alger, by organizing a colored post in New Orleans on New Year's eve. Thus the death of the Confederate chieftain was the indirect cause that led to the establishment of a Grand Army of the Republic post in the South. The white posts are much excited over the matter, but they cannot shake off the companionship of the colored brother who fought with them in the same cause .-Shreveport Times.

The Claim That It Is Caused by But Four Things—The Prematurely Gray.

One great question which the men of the present day ask, which has been propounded frequently, is how can be hair be prevented from becoming white. The case is generally urged that the inquirer is too young to yet have gray hair and wishes only to have hair in accordance with his age and facial appearance. To quote from one letter verbatim will give a clear view of the disturbing matter:

"There are a great many men in St. Louis who note with dismay an abun-

"There are a great many men in St.

it, would lead most of the men to dye or color the hair were it not that they known, because usually they contain why a person turning gray prema-turely should desire to change the hair seems an enigma. Silver hair with a young and fresh face is only an added beauty, especially if the eyes are dark. Novelists have chosen their favorite heroines and heroes with the prematurely gray hair as the most pronounced and distinguished in ap-pearance. "Vashti" in her first youth with silver hair was supposed to win all hearts, and to become very local and practical some of the very best looking men in St. Louis, as well as women, have their faces crowned by women, have their faces crowned by silver hair.

There are three things which cause gray hair; they are brains, neuralgia and old age—oh! and a fourth, too; fear or distress. One of the brightest, sweetest faces in this city is that of a gifted woman whose wealth of hair turned white in one single night. She was to have been married; the guests arrived, the beautiful girl, in her bridal arrived, the beautiful girl, in her bridal robes, awaited the coming of the bridegroom; hours passed by and the bridegroom came not. The guests de-parted and the brideshut herself in her room alone. In the morning her dark hair had become perfectly white. Such a strange, strange sight; the beautiful girlish face with its wealth of spotless hair. She has never since that night mentioned the subject. Whether she has heard from her delinquent fiance cannot be ascertained, at least outside her relatives, but she is brave and beautiful and took up her burden of ife fearlessly.

There is no way of intercepting gray hair except from the absence, as before said, of brains, neuralgia, fear or old age. When it does come, only an ar-tificial means can change it to the former hue, and dyes are mostly dan

Gray hair at least is not the sign of decreasing energy, and the gray haired beaux of society are usually the most active and often the greatest favorites. Another feature of gray hair is that it is generally fine hair, and a silver head of hair is generally an abundant one.-St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mottoes for Sun Dials. Dials live over into this age of cheap clocks and watches not by reason of their use or convenience, but because of their associations. They were for-merly designed with taste and bore inscriptions suited to their purpose. Many of these are historic, as the one that used to be at Paul's Cross in London, which said, in Latin, "I number none but sunny hours." An old fashioned dial in a garden o

An old fashioned dai in a garden of Sussex, England, is said to bear upon its plate these four motioes, each for its own season: "After Darkness, Light," "Alas! how swift," "I warn whilst I move;" "So passes Life."
Familiar old mottoes are some of our every day proverbs. Some of these are, "All things do wax and wane;" "The longest day must end;" "Make hay while the sun shines."

One of the most appropriate of these mottoes used to be borne by a dial that stood in the old Temple Gardens, and it is said to have been furnished his lordship was hard at work one day in his chambers, when an idle student dropped in to ask for a motto the great ford ch for the new sun dial which was then being built. Twice the student humbly made his request, but the grave chancellor gave no reply or sign of having heard it. At last, as the pe-titioner began for the third time, Ba-con looked up and said, angrily: "Sirrah, be gone about your busi-ness!"

"A thousand thanks, my lord," replied the suitor. "The very thing for the dial! Nothing could be better."— Youth's Companion.

Making Cans by Machinery Making Cans by Machinery.

An exhibition was given the other day at the works, Otsego and Dickinson streets, of the operation of a machine for rapidly making tin fruit, vegetable and fish cans.

The machine is about fifty feet long. The flat tin of a proper size for the can is placed on an endless chain at one end. It then passes into a machine where the tin is rolled into the shape of a can and the edges fastened. A of a can and the edges fastened. A series of gas jets next heat the partly made can, and a pot of solder distri-butes its metal along the edge. The can then passes by a sharp turn to a traveler, where fingers grasp it and hold it in position at the top and bottom of the can drops through a slot into position. Another series of gas jets and solder further on fix one end, and then, by an ingenious movement of the traveler, the other end is pre-sented to still another series of gas jets and solder, and the can is ready for use. It was just forty-five seconds from the time the flat sheet of tin was placed in the machine until it passed out, fifty feet away, a finished can. The machine, it is claimed, is the only one of the kind ever built, and is almost entirely automatic in all its movements. It is said that, with ten men, from 40,000 to 60,000 cans can be hands to turn out that many by hand in the same time. One particular virtue is claimed for the cans made on this machine—"not a particle of solder enters the interior."—Philadelphia Ledger.
